NOAA to search for Lost WW II Ships

This summer NOAA will lead a research expedition to locate and study World War II shipwrecks sunk in 1942 off North Carolina during the Battle of the Atlantic, specifically the Battle of Convoy KS-520. The shipwrecks are located in an area known as the "Graveyard of the Atlantic," which includes sunken vessels from U.S. and British naval fleets, merchant ships and German U-boats. On July 14, 1942, a merchant convoy of 19 ships and five military escorts left Hampton Roads, Va., sailing south to Key West, Fla., to deliver cargo to aid the war effort. The next day, off Cape Hatteras, N.C., Convoy KS-520 was attacked by German submarine U-576. The convoy fought back with an American warship ramming the U-boat while U.S. Navy aircraft dropped depth charges that sunk the submarine.

A note of thanks to Mr. Andrew Anderson for his very informative presentation on the effects of alcohol on boaters and boating. And many thanks to Mr. Arthur Campbell for arranging Mr. Anderson's visit to the meeting. If you know or hear of someone who can bring a timely focus to a subject of interest to the group, please bring it to the attention of the Program Committee: David Novak (Hall & Co.), Ted Crosby (CIGNA), Jim Gallaudet (Interatlantic.)

If you have not paid your membership dues, (they are overdue as of March 1st) your name will not appear on the membership list, soon to be distributed to members in good standing. Please return your statement with your dues now. If you have a question on this subject, please call the Purser, Ms. Joyce Gillis, immediately.

We do not have the name of a speaker to give you at this time. Our "salute" to the Whitbread will involve having several crew members join us for lunch. (thanks again to Art Campbell!) with hopes of hearing some "war stories" about the trip to date. Visit the boats around the 17th Street Causeway this weekend, and come with your questions for these brave men and women who risk so much for the joys of the sailing life.

See you there.

Nautical Word of the Month:

Binnacle List : A ship's sick-list. A binnacle was the stand on which the ship's compass was mounted. In the eighteenth century and probably before, a list was given to the officer or mate of the watch, containing the names of men unable to report for duty. The list was kept at the binnacle.
